

Immigration Expert Steve Maggi explains E-2 Visas and the Eternal Question: How much is required for investment?

Whenever I advise a potential or existing client on the E-2 visa process, the inevitable question always pops up: “How much do I absolutely have to invest to qualify?”, “How much is enough”. My answer is always very lawyerlike : “It depends”.

What does it depend on? First of all, it depends on....

A Tribute to the Life and Work of The Amazing Joan Maggi

I had just started my last semester at Georgetown Law School, looking forward to graduating, sitting for the bar exam, and beginning my first job in Miami when the phone rang at my friend's house where I was set to watch the NFL playoffs. "It's for you", he said, an unexpected call. It was my Godmother Denise, who had been like a second mom to me since I came to the U.S. from Argentina when I was five.

"Hello, darling," she said. I felt sick from the anticipation of her next words, knowing that something was wrong. "Joanie passed away this morning, I am so sorry." My life was turned upside down forever that day. The woman who had raised me all by herself was gone.

Today marks the twenty-year anniversary of my mom's passing. It is something that continues to affect me. It is something that still pushes me to go forward, to make her proud, to work hard and fight for my clients and make a difference, however small way I can. So today's newsletter is not just about immigration law, it's about life, about love, about the incredible art that my mom created for the world to share and enjoy.
