Welcome to our November Ewire

We like to keep you up to date with ideas and information that will help you gain the maximum advantage from working with us.

Our Ewires will be sent to you regularly to keep you in touch with the latest legal news and we hope you will find these bulletins interesting.

In this edition, we examine the world of defective products and contractual relationships, and celebrate the work done by Silverman Sherliker's Italian Desk, headed by Dimitri Iesini and Liza Zucconi, when they recently acted for Bugatti in preparation for the launch of the brand's London boutique.

We also consider the perils involved in buying a classic car, and with the help of guest contributor and fellow-IPG member firm Klueger & Stein of Los Angeles, we consider the options that are available for structuring International Joint Ventures.

There is a guest feature from financial planners Finura that examines the changes announced by George Osborne at the Conservative Party Conference and how they could provide opportunities to investors and finally a look at why it pays to be savvy in the London residential property market.

If you would like further information on any of the issues reported here, please contact us.

We operate a responsible email policy at Silverman Sherliker LLP Solicitors, so if you do not wish to receive further copies of our Ewire, please click here to unsubscribe.

Defective products – advising the manufacturer

Product recalls are always a challenging issue, and when balancing the cost of the recall against the risk of damage to the brand should a faulty product result in a fatality, more than just legal issues come into play.

It pays to be savvy in the London residential property market

The market is likely to remain sluggish until the election, but, once the uncertainty over a mansion tax has dissipated, it is likely to snap back with prices rising rapidly.
